

Job Applicant Privacy Notice

(April 2022)

Phyllis Tuckwell Memorial Hospice Ltd, known as Phyllis Tuckwell (PT), collects and processes personal data relating to job applicants as part of our recruitment process. PT is committed to being transparent about how we collect and use that data and to meeting our data protection obligations.

This privacy notice explains how and why we use and hold the data you provide us. Please read this document carefully.

PT reserves the right to amend this document from time to time to ensure that we remain compliant with the Data Protection Act 2018 and the General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR).

What information does PT collect?

PT collects a range of information about you.

This includes

- your name, address and contact details, including email address and telephone number
- details of your qualifications, skills, experience and employment history
- information about your current salary
- whether or not you have a disability for which PT needs to make reasonable adjustments during the recruitment process
- information about your entitlement to work in the UK
- equal opportunities monitoring information, including information about your ethnic origin, sexual orientation, health and religion or belief.

PT collects this information in a variety of ways including your application form and CV, from your passport or other identity documents, or through interviews and other forms of assessment.

Data, such as your application form and interview notes will be stored in a range of different places, including our secure filing cabinets and electronically on our HR database (Ciphr) and email.

Why does PT process personal data?

PT needs to process data to undertake the recruitment process at your request and, should you be successful in your application, prior to entering into a contract with you. In some cases, PT needs to process data to ensure that we are complying with our legal obligations. For example, we are required to check a successful applicant's eligibility to work in the UK before employment starts.

PT has a legitimate interest in processing personal data during the recruitment process and for keeping records of the process. Processing data from job applicants allows PT to manage the recruitment process, assess and confirm a candidate's suitability for employment and decide who to appoint. PT may also need to process data from job applicants to respond to and defend against legal claims.

Where PT processes other special categories of data, such as information about ethnic origin, sexual orientation, health or religion or belief, this is for equal opportunities monitoring purposes and is anonymous.

For many of our roles PT is obliged to seek information from the Disclosure and Barring Service.

Who has access to your data?

Your information will be shared internally for the purposes of the recruitment exercise, including (but not limited to) members of the HR team, the recruiting manager and interviewers involved in the recruitment process.

PT will not share your data with third parties, unless your application for employment is successful and we make you an offer of employment. PT will then share your data with others including former employers to obtain references for you, Occupational Health and if appropriate, the Disclosure and Barring Service.

PT will seek information from third parties only once a job offer has been made.

PT will not transfer your data outside the European Economic Area.

How does PT protect your data?

PT takes the security of your data seriously and has policies and controls in place to ensure that your data is not lost, accidentally destroyed, misused or disclosed, and is only accessed by employees in the performance of their duties.

How long does PT keep your data?

PT holds data for no longer than is necessary for the purposes for which it is processed and in accordance with our Data Protection Policy. If your application for employment is unsuccessful, with your agreement, PT will hold your data on file for six months after the end of the relevant recruitment process. At the end of that period, or should you withdraw your consent prior to this, your data is deleted and confidentially destroyed.

If your application for employment is successful, personal data gathered during the recruitment process will be transferred to your personnel file and retained during your employment.

Your rights

As a data subject, you have a number of rights.

You can:

- access and obtain a copy of your data on request
- require PT to change incorrect or incomplete data
- require PT to delete or stop processing your data, for example where the data is no longer necessary for the purposes of processing
- object to the processing of your data where PT is relying on its legitimate interests as the legal ground for processing, for example should you withdraw from the recruitment process
- ask PT to stop processing data for a period if data is inaccurate or there is a dispute about whether or not your interests override PT's legitimate grounds for processing data

If you would like to exercise any of these rights, please contact the HR team at HR.mailbox@pth.org.uk . You can make a subject access request by completing PT's applicant data request form available from the HR team.

If you believe that PT has not complied with your data protection rights, you can complain to the Information Commissioner.

What if you do not provide personal data?

You are under no statutory or contractual obligation to provide data to PT during the recruitment process. However, if you do not provide the information, PT will not be able to process your application correctly, if at all.
